Oral anticoagulation is, even under optimal conditions, not completely predictable. This emphasizes the need to initiate such therapy as soon as possible. The INR (International Normalized Ratio) is the best indicator of the prothrombin time, i.e. the sensitivity and specificity of the International Normalized Ratio is 100%. As an important risk factor for thromboembolism in the oral anticoagulation of patients with atrial fibrillation, the INR should be monitored at least once a week and, if possible, 2-3 times a week. In case of an unacceptable or suboptimal INR course, the aim of the INR monitoring should be to maintain the INR in the therapeutic range. On the other hand, the individual INR-profile should be used to reduce the risk of overanticoagulation. Numerous studies have shown that the area-under-the-INR-time-curve (AUC-INR) is a useful tool to estimate the risk of thromboembolism. Furthermore, the area-under-the-INR-time-curve is a good indicator of the individual's INR-plateau and half-life. In contrast, the INR-value of the next dose of coumar

The distribution of the neuronal phosphoproteins MAP2 and TDP-43 in the pyramidal neurons of the rat cerebral cortex: a quantitative and qualitative analysis by confocal microscopy. We have mapped the somatodendritic and nuclear distribution of the neuronal phosphoproteins MAP2 and TDP-43 in the rat neocortical layers V, VI, and III with the help of immunofluorescence confocal microscopy. The distribution of both proteins is very homogeneous in layers V and VI. MAP2 is found in the axonal tracts of layer VI, where it accumulates at the terminal branches of the subcortical fibers of the external capsule and in the white matter of layers V and VI. MAP2 is also found in the perikarya of the pyramidal neurons of layers V and VI, where it associates preferentially with the dendritic spines. TDP-43 is found in all neuronal nuclei and is more or less homogeneously distributed in the cytoplasm. We have made some quantitative and qualitative observations on the two proteins in pyramidal neurons of layers V and VI. The MAP2/TDP-43 ratio is higher in the somatodendritic compartments, especially in the pyramidal perikarya, than in the nuclear compartment. The amount of MAP2 in the nucleus appears to be constant, suggesting that MAP2 might be involved in several processes other than the assembly of microtubules. Our observations suggest that the MAP2/TDP-43 ratio may have significance in pathophysiological events such as trauma and neurodegenerative disease.2008-10-19 Ghetto Hot Hot This is what it's really like to be surrounded by a pack of psychopaths in a ghetto. After the regular poverty and violence, a group of three guys start to surround a young woman who is walking down the street on a cell phone. The young woman stops for about a minute, with her head down, talking to someone, when one of the guys pulls out a gun and points it at her. He slowly aims to make sure the girl is not only paying attention, but to assure that he gets the message across. "Show me your tits." "Show me your pussy." After a few minutes of provocation, he's gotten pretty close, and now it's time to really show her his cock: "If you show me your tits, i'll
